Twitter is an American information service and online social network where users post and communicate with messages known as "tweets." Registered users can post, like retweet tweets, but unregistered users can only read them. Users access the tweed through the website interface or use the "SMS" service (Short Messege Service) or the software for mobile devices ("application").

Twitter is a social network, it is one of the first that came out there in 2006 and that people usually use as a rule to keep themselves informed, to follow the news more closely, to share likes and interests with other like-minded people, and also sometimes to have a closer or personal contact with people they admire from different spheres of society.

To start using the application when Downloading Twitter Free it is necessary to create an account, for this it is necessary that you have an email, that you choose a password and username that must be unique. This username is what will identify you when you comment or post. From the moment you have already created the username on Twitter, the web address of your profile becomes twitter.com/xxxxx (your username).

Once you have your twitter profile created and have already entered the social network, the two basic pillars, the two concepts that you have to understand about this social network to be able to handle it with ease are the concepts of followers and following.

Followers are the people who follow you and therefore can see everything you post on your twitter profile, all tweets, photos, animated gifts, in short, everything you put on your twitter profile will reach your followers For example, if we touch in profile, we can see all the people who can read what they are posting on the twitter account. On the other hand, we have the list of Following, which is the people you follow, all their tweets they share on their profile will come to you on your twitter account.

Twitter features

RTE basically consists of publishing from your twitter profile the tweet that someone else has written from their twitter profile, in this way you make a little echo and get it to reach more people. For example, if you navigate to your twitter homepage and look for a tweet that you find interesting at the end of the message, the retweet button appears with the option of adding a comment when it is published on your profile, a little to enrich or connect to the Retweet what you are going to do from your account

Mark a tweet with a little heart to indicate to the author that you liked it or that you found it especially interesting, this is very similar to the facebook or instagram like where we do the same with the content published by the people we follow. If you are browsing your twitter page and find a tweet that for some reason interests you, you can click on the heart that appears next to its publication to be able to indicate to the author that you liked what he has shared.

Private messages on Twitter is a series of messages that are shared on Twitter but only reach its recipient, that is, they are not public messages like the tweets you put on your profile, but are only addressed to one person and which is therefore a kind of private chat conversation between those two people. To be able to send a private message, you simply have to go to that person's profile and tap on the envelope icon allowing you to send a message to that person that only they will be able to see, no one else will see, that is, it is an essential requirement of that both people follow each other, you follow that person and that other person follows you; Although there is also the possibility of having private messages open, this means that this person can receive private messages without the need for this requirement, but this is an option that may or may not be activated.
