What will change in each game is the color of the silhouette you control and it will be different from that of the other players. Its objective is easy, you have to color all the areas so that your rivals collide with them and thus be eliminated, so you will have to be very careful where you go, because they will also paint their color. Likewise, if the trail that is left on the road is touched, or you collide head-on with another player or if by some chance one of the opponents touches the tail of your figure, your game will also be over. All these rules will make it a dizzying experience since you will have to be aware of what you are painting and what others are doing so as not to cross your path.
